June 2025, Vol. L, No. 12

If you have been following the news about federal funding for public media over the last few months, you are probably confused and increasingly frustrated. The current presidential administration has made it clear that it would like to eliminate funding for PBS, NPR, and local stations that was previously approved by Congress. The administration also continues to try to discredit the work we do for the American public.

As of this writing, we are still waiting for clarification on Trump's recent executive order to slash funds for NPR and PBS via the Corporation for Public Broadcasting (CPB). Patricia Harrison, president and CEO of CPB explained that "CPB is not a federal executive agency subject to the President's authority. Congress directly authorized and funded CPB to be a private nonprofit corporation wholly independent of the federal government."

By the time you read this, the situation might have changed again, but the bottom line remains that federal funding for public media is currently at risk. This essential support makes up about 20% of Illinois Public Media's budget, and it helps us provide you with trusted journalism, educational programming, and lifesaving information during emergencies. Losing these funds would have a devastating impact on the local service we provide to central Illinois communities.

This is your public media station, so I encourage you to share your opinion with your congressional representatives and fellow community members. To get the latest information and learn how you can help, go to will.illinois.edu/protectwill.

And, as we approach the end of the fiscal year, your support of IPM is more important than ever. If you are able to make a gift before June 30, please go to willgive.org or use the envelope we have included in this issue of Patterns. Thank you for everything you do to support and protect this vital community resource.

COVER STORY

Dino Week! premieres June 16

During Dino Week! PBS presents new and encore programs that feature these iconic prehistoric creatures.

Walking with Dinosaurs headlines the week with a new series that reimagines one of the BBC's best-loved factual shows. The new six-part series will air two episodes nightly at 7 pm Monday-Wednesday, June 16–18. It will be rebroadcast Wednesdays at 7 pm beginning June 25.

Narrated by Bertie Carvel, each episode will tell the dramatic story of an individual dinosaur whose remains are currently being unearthed by the world's leading dinosaur hunters. Thanks to cutting-edge science, experts can reveal how these prehistoric creatures lived, hunted, fought, and died more accurately than ever before. The series will bring these prehistoric stories to life with state-of-the-art visual effects — making each episode a gripping dinosaur drama based on the very latest evidence. Across the six episodes, audiences will meet a range of spectacular dinosaur species in an array of prehistoric landscapes.

Other programs during Dino Week! include: Nature presents Museum Alive with David Attenborough (9 pm Monday, June 16) and Attenborough and the Jurassic Sea Monster (9 pm Tuesday, June 17); Jurassic Fortunes from Secrets of the Dead (10 pm Tuesday June 17); and NOVA presents Alaskan Dinosaurs (9 pm Wednesday, June 18) and Dinosaur Apocalypse: The New Evidence (10 pm Wednesday, June 18).

Exploring the impact of humans

Earth has never experienced anything like us: a single species dominating and transforming the planet. Biologist Shane Campbell-Staton travels the globe to explore our human footprint and to discover how the things we do reveal who we truly are. Part science series and part travel show, season 2 of Human Footprint tracks down invasive species, discovers the impact of the planet's top predator (humans!), discovers the profound impact of dogs on humans, meets five species that made allies with humans, explores three thriving urban species, and explores the human footprint of cotton. The six-part series airs Wednesdays at 8 pm beginning June 25.

‘Shelter Me’ features local pet cancer trials

This month, Shelter Me, an Emmy Award-winning documentary series with heartwarming stories about pet dogs and the people who love them, shares national and local stories about groundbreaking clinical trials for dogs with cancer that are leading to new treatments for people.

Shelter Me: The Cancer Pioneers, airing at 9 pm Monday, June 9, features leading scientists at the National Cancer Institute, National Institutes of Health, and academic universities across the country – including Timothy Fan, professor of veterinary medical oncology in the College of Veterinary Medicine and associate director for Translational Research and Development at the Cancer Center at Illinois at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign.

In a scene from 'Shelter Me: The Cancer Pioneers,' Dr. Tim Fan, right, looks on as Clinical Trials Coordinator Rebecca Kamerer greets Dezzi, a patient treated in 2021 for malignant melanoma using a novel immunotherapy approach.

“Training the immune system to fight cancer has made a tremendous impact on saving the lives of people over the past two decades,” Fan said. “However, even with the best treatment options currently available, only a fraction of human cancer patients achieve long-lasting benefits.

“What is learned from clinical studies in pet dogs and cats with cancer can be rapidly translated to inform future human clinical studies, ultimately accelerating the development of immunotherapies that will have the greatest life-saving impacts for both pets and human cancer patients, alike.

“Making a positive impact on fighting cancer can start with a shared vision among veterinarians, physicians, and basic scientists. Valuing scientific discovery and clinical translation are essential to stoke the flames of innovation that can benefit both pets and people alike,” Fan said.

Behind the scenes of ‘Wolf Hall’

Wolf Hall: The Mirror and the Light – Reflections

dives into the making of the original television series, Wolf Hall, and the sequel, The Mirror and the Light. Both series are based on Hilary Mantel's Booker Prize-winning trio of novels. In this special, cast members and creators discuss what it was like to return to filming a decade after the first series and how the passage of time has influenced their view of 16th-century England. The program explores the series' locations and how modern production techniques brought the England of the 1520s to life. Wolf Hall: The Mirror and the Light – Reflections airs at 5:30 pm and 11 pm Sunday, June 8.

New detective series is adapted from 'Astrid'

A new British-Belgian detective drama tells the story of an alliance between DI Bea Metcalf and Patience Evans, a brilliant, self-taught criminologist with keen crime scene instincts, who has been working in the criminal records department of the City of York police and is autistic.

Patience stars Laura Fraser as Metcalf and Ella Maisy Purvis (who is herself autistic) as Patience. The series explores autism and neurodiversity, showcasing how Patience navigates a neurotypical world. It is adapted from the French television series "Astrid et Raphaëlle," which has aired on Walter Presents as Astrid. Patience airs Sundays at 7 pm beginning June 15. Binge all six episodes on the night of its broadcast premiere with WILL Passport.

They must also support each other through changing times, family struggles, and personal secrets. This season, Alphy feels like he's found a home, but he's forced to confront secrets he's kept close to his chest. Will he be able to let anyone fully in, or must he confront truths about himself first? Season 10 of Grantchester on MASTERPIECE airs

Sundays at 8 pm beginning June 15. Stream season 10 beginning June 15 on WILL Passport. You can stream seasons 1-9 now as an added member benefit.

Exploring the life journey of Janis Ian

As a teenager during the 1960s, acclaimed American singer-songwriter Janis Ian used to jam with Jimi Hendrix in Greenwich Village bars and party with Janis Joplin. During the 1970s, Ian befriended Bruce Springsteen as they recorded albums at the same studio. In the 1980s, she played duets with Dolly Parton and Willie Nelson in Nashville. She lived the adventurous life of a rock star. At the same time, she contributed hit songs to the American pop canon that addressed social problems, winning the Grammy Award for Best Female Pop Vocal Performance. She also encountered her share of setbacks and stress. American Masters presents Janis Ian: Breaking Silence at 8 pm Friday, June 20. With access to Ian's incredible body of music, her vast archive, family, friends, famed collaborators, and music journalists, the film chronicles the singer's epic life journey, including coming out publicly about her loving relationship with her wife, Pat Snyder. The show is available to stream with WILL Passport on June 20.

The DJs of Chicago's house music era

Before house music became a genre pulsing from the speakers of clubs from London to Ibiza to Cape Town, it was a new kind of groove growing in the underground disco club scene in Chicago's Black and gay communities. It all started with a group of friends who wanted to replicate for Chicagoans the cathartic joy of New York City's loft parties. They didn't know they were making history at the time, but they laid the foundation for house music, upon which Frankie Knuckles (left), the so-called "Godfather of House Music," would build a new genre that became a safe space for many. Explore this genre in a film produced by PBS member station WTTW, Chicago. House Music – A Cultural Revolution: American Stories, airs at 10 pm Friday, June 20.

A look at the women behind the (famous) quilts of Gee's Bend

The Gee's Bend quilters are renowned for their vibrant, free-form quilting tradition passed down through generations in the small rural community of Gee's Bend, Alabama. They are celebrated for their use of improvisational techniques and bold color palettes, resulting in unique and abstract quilt designs. The Quilting Women of Gee's Bend explores this isolated community of women who are now respected worldwide as one of the cornerstones of African American art, history, and culture. The town has historical ties to its post-slavery roots and a tradition of quilting that has been embraced by the modern art world. These woven pieces of art have been featured and celebrated in museums across the country, yet little is known about the makers themselves. The film takes viewers on a journey to find the truth and highlights a community of women who are national treasures. The Quilting Women of Gee's Bend airs at 8:30 pm Tuesday, June 3.

community advisor SPOTLIGHT

In this periodic feature, we introduce members of Illinois Public Media's Community Advisors committee. Members assist us in many ways, including gathering information about community issues and needs, increasing community awareness of WILL and its services, and encouraging new sources of funding for specific projects.

Mindy Mallady, Danville

Q. How long have you lived in the region?

A. I have lived in central Illinois most of my life, 30 of those years in Danville.

Q. How long have you been on this committee?

A. I joined the Community Advisor group as a representative for Vermilion County in 2022.

Q. Why do you think it's important to have community members available to offer direct feedback to IPM?

A. I enjoy listening to area advocates and value their unique perspectives. These sessions offer insight on topics pertinent to each region of the viewing area. Reports by department directors are shared and challenges discussed. Advisors are often invited to participate with scheduled station events, which leads to a deeper appreciation for these public services. I see Community Advisors playing an important liaison role in connecting area resources and contacts. This assistance can aid the staff in gathering direct information regarding news, funding, or highlighting local events in my community.

Q. What are your favorite shows on WILL's stations?

A. As a child of the '70s, I enjoyed children's educational programming, as well as shows on cooking, gardening, remodeling, painting, and British comedy. As an adult, I've added Antiques Roadshow, Austin City Limits, Great Performances, and of course shows on MASTERPIECE to my watch list.

Some new favorites include Independent Lens, Prairie Fire, Illinois Soul station, and the 217 Today podcast. Illinois Public Media has something for everyone.

Q. Why do you think Illinois Public Media is important for central Illinois?

A. I believe Illinois Public Media has an important mission to inform and showcase cultural aspects of the world, broadcast quality educational shows, entertain, and focus on the shared experience of central Illinois citizens. Programs created by our local station capture our unique sense of community. Offering all viewing areas this public service elevates those without means to have exposure beyond their homes. Our lives are truly enhanced by our local stations!

Joy Yang performs in Collins Studio

Joy Yang, a performing artist who specializes in piano and theremin, performed in the Collins Television Studio in mid-April to an audience of Friends of WILL and faculty from the University of Illinois School of Music. Some of the performance will be featured in a future episode of Prairie Fire along with an interview.

Yang's website says her music is "anchored in the roots of classical, jazz, electronic music, and omin-idiomatic free improvisation." She played the theremin and piano, performing some of her original arrangements as well as an improvisational piece.

Attendees expressed their appreciation for the intimate atmosphere and the time Yang took to provide context about her performance pieces. You can watch her dynamic performance of "Basso Ostinato" at IPM's YouTube channel.

News Brews & Beatz: Community members discuss state of Black communities

In late April, Illinois Public Media hosted a panel discussion in the Collins Television Studio as part of its News, Brews & Beatz series.

Prominent community leaders from government and social justice, along with more than 50 guests turned out for the 10th edition of News, Brews & Beatz that focused on “The State of Champaign-Urbana’s Black Communities through the lens of Black Leadership.” Participants were able to learn more about the topic and to engage in conversation.

Guest panelists included Chief Larry Boone, Urbana Police Department; Rev. Rickey Parks, Pilgrim Missionary Baptist Church, Champaign; Joe Stovall, State Farm agent; and Jennifer Tatum, superintendent, Urbana School District #116. The discussion was co-hosted by Reginald Hardwick, IPM news and public affairs director; Tracy Parsons, facilitator for the Champaign County Community Coalition; and David Pierce, news reporter for IPM News. Jill Clements is the executive producer.

“Our guests provided insights into the challenges from the perspective of local classrooms and churches,” Hardwick said. “Urbana police chief Larry Boone’s discussion about the poverty he has witnessed and the neglect of some neighborhoods should be eye opening to all central Illinoisans. We hope the conversation will spur solutions.”

Other key takeaways from the discussion included defining what Black leadership looks like today; the challenges and triumphs made over the last few years with local Black leadership in key city positions in business, policing, and education; along with identifying the three core local communities — the university recruit, the townie, and the boomeranger (those that were born here, left, and then returned home) — and their quality of living needs.

The full discussion can be watched on the Illinois Public Media YouTube channel (QR Code at right). To learn more about the series and see a playlist of past events, go to newsbrewsbeatz.org.

New student fellow joins IPM

Melissa “Mel” Bialecki Miller has joined the WILL Classical 90.9 FM team as the next John Fryane Classical Music Graduate Student Fellow.

Miller is a Ph.D. candidate at the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign studying ethnomusicology with a minor in Russian, East European, and Eurasian Studies. Her dissertation research on Ukrainian popular music explores the variety of roles musicians play to support, disseminate, and perpetuate Ukrainian culture in the context of the Russian invasion. She is especially interested in how Ukrainian folk idioms are employed in popular music and how female musicians challenge and reshape ideas about gender during wartime. In 2023, she completed eight months of fieldwork in Warsaw, Poland, where she attended Ukrainian concerts and spoke with artists and diasporic audiences about the role of music during the war.

“I’m excited for this opportunity to bring classical music to the local community,” Miller said. “My background is in academia, and what I’ve always found most rewarding about that work is education and outreach. Whenever I see a student enjoy a genre of music they might never have engaged with before, or realize something new about a piece they already enjoy, that’s when I feel I’ve really done my job.

“Working with WILL feels like a natural extension of that work. I love talking about music, I love telling stories, and I’m looking forward to learning to do all of that through the medium of radio.”

Although Miller possesses a strong background in classical music — she studied cello since she was 10 years old, performed in university and professional ensembles, and taught music from kindergarten to the undergraduate level — radio presents new territory for her.

“Classical radio is such an important and accessible means by which we bring this music to the community,” she said. “So I’m looking forward to learning more about what goes into that and how to do it well.”

She believes radio is one way we can counter the notion that classical music is an elitist art form.

“You don’t need to buy a concert ticket or find time to attend the symphony — all you need to listen is a home or car radio or internet access,” she explained. “As someone from a small Midwestern town, I didn’t have many opportunities to attend the opera or symphony growing up, so radio was where I began exploring classical music. Now, I’m grateful to be in a position where I can continue that cycle by bringing that music to others.”

‘MAG’ fans attend taping at Allerton Park

A group Mid American Gardener fans braved rain and chilly weather on Sunday, May 4, to attend a live taping of the show at Allerton Park and Retreat Center.

The blustery day moved the event indoors to the mansion library but that didn’t dampen guests’ spirits as they learned how to nurture their hydrangeas, how to recognize cicada damage on trees, and the best way to pick asparagus. Mid American Gardener host Tinisha Spain was joined by panelists Jennifer Schultz-Nelson and Jennifer Fishburn who shared their expertise and answered questions sent in by viewers. Spain and the panelists also answered questions from the audience that covered topics ranging from garden pest control to when to plant rhubarb. After the taping, guests enjoyed drinks and appetizers in the mansion’s solarium. The donor event was a collaboration between Illinois Public Media, Allerton Park and Retreat Center, and University of Illinois Extension. This episode of Mid American Gardener aired on WILL-TV on May 22 but you can stream it at will.illinois.edu or via the PBS Video app.
